“Shopping around for care was easier than I thought.”

With breast cancer common in her family, Nancy was told she needed a breast MRI after receiving irregular results on her annual mammogram. In the past, she would have gone straight to the local teaching hospital in her neighborhood for the procedure.

Now, concerned about her out-of-pocket costs and knowing there were multiple in-network facilities close by, Nancy logged on to Health Cost Estimator+.

With a quick search, Nancy learned she could save over $500 out of pocket, by traveling a few miles to another, smaller hospital that appeared to be in her health plan's network. After confirming with Health Advocate that it was and reviewing the hospital's quality scores, Nancy scheduled the procedure, with added peace of mind that she made the right decision.

“A quick search—and a quick call—saved me hundreds of dollars!”

Having just signed up for a new high-deductible health plan at work, Nick was nervous when his doctor ordered an abdominal CT scan for some pain he was having.

After logging on to Health Cost Estimator+, he was shocked to learn, based on his new plan, that the estimated out-of-pocket cost for the procedure ranged from $200 at a local imaging center to over $1,300 at the nearest hospital.

Nick called Health Advocate to find out if the imaging center was in his plan's network. His Personal Health Advocate confirmed that it was, scheduled the appointment, and made sure Dan's results were sent quickly back to his doctor's office.
